Inside No. 9 is a British black comedy anthology television programme written and created by Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith. It aired on BBC Two from 5 February 2014 to 12 June 2024, running for 9 series and 55 episodes. Each 30-minute episode is a self-contained story with new characters and a new setting, almost all starring Pemberton or Shearsmith (usually both). Aside from the writers, each episode has a new cast, allowing Inside No. 9 to attract a number of well-known actors. The stories are linked only by a setting related to the number 9 in some way, and a brass hare statue that is hidden in all episodes. Themes and tone vary from episode to episode, but all have elements of comedy and horror or perverse humour, in addition to a plot twist.

Inside No. 9 as a whole has been very well received by critics, holding a 100% rating on Rotten Tomatoes. Critics have praised the humour and creativity of the scripts, as well as the talent of the featured actors.

In May 2024, it was announced that Pemberton and Shearsmith had adapted the television series into a West End stage play, titled Inside No. 9 Stage/Fright. Both will be performing in the production, which premiered in January 2025, at the Wyndham's Theatre, London where it continued until April 9, and will tour the UK in autumn.

A one-hour documentary, Inside No. 9: The Party's Over, aired on BBC One on 22 December 2024. The documentary gave a behind-the-scenes look at filming the last ever series, plus interviews with cast and crew from the nine series.

'Francis Hetling' is a fictitious British pioneer of early Victorian photography, under whose name artist Graham Ovenden and photographer Howard Grey created images in the style of 19th-century photography. Some of these photographs were included in a 1974 exhibition at London's National Portrait Gallery and some images were sold.

In 1980, Ovenden and Grey were prosecuted on charges of conspiracy. The trial revealed that both were involved in the appearance of the Hetling photographs. Grey was responsible for the technical side of creating the photographs, while Ovenden gave them the appearance of early Victorian calotypes. Ovenden stated in court that the purpose was not to obtain a large sum of money, but to show the true calibre of those in the art business, who declare themselves experts without knowing anything, and those who profit by converting aesthetic values into financial values. Grey and Ovenden were acquitted by a jury. The trial was reported in the British media and has been analysed in academic and popular works on art forgery.

During the trial, the press reported that mothers of the models had expressed dissatisfaction with the way they had been posed by Grey during the photo shoot. In 2013, Ovenden was found guilty of charges of indecency with a child and a charge of indecent assault against a child.
